Redemptive Relationships

From Instruments in the Redeemer's Hands by Paul David Tripp, P&R Publishing 2002.

When we forget to incarnate the love of Christ, we take our relationships as our own.
Soon they are governed by our pleasure, comfort, and ease. We get irritated at people who interfere with these things, and much of our anger is due to the fact that we are relationship thieves. People do not belong to us; they belong to God! Relationships are not primarily for our fulfillment. On the contrary, relationships between sinners are messy, difficult, labor-intensive, and demanding, but in that, they are designed to result in God's glory and our good as he is worshiped and our hearts are changed.
Effective personal ministry begins when we confess that we have taken relationships that belong to God and used them for our own selfish purposes.

When we have confessed and repented, we are ready to ask what role our relationships can play in the work Christ wants us to do. If the relationships God gives us are not mere luxuries for our own happiness, what is God's plan for them? This brings us to the LOVE function in personal ministry. God's relationship to us is loving and redemptive, and he wants our relationships to mirror those qualities.
This means at least three things:

1. He has a higher goal for our relationships than our personal happiness.
2. He wants our relationships to be the context for the change he works in and through us.
3. We need to build relationships that encourage this work of change.

We can understand this by considering the way Christ works in our own lives. Scripture uses three words to describe his work: justification, adoption, and sanctification.
